

Simple wardrobe using locker handles (IKEA Hack)

by elpilote on November 9, 2009

Table of Contents

License: Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike (by-nc-sa)	2
Intro: Simple wardrobe using locker handles (IKEA Hack)	2
step 1: Parts	2
step 2: Built	2
Related Instructables	3
Advertisements	3

License: Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike \(by-nc-sa\)

Intro: Simple wardrobe using locker handles (IKEA Hack)

Recently my girlfriend and I were shopping Ikea, looking for a simple but nice wardrobe for her new apartment. Nothing really caught our attention. As I am following Ikea Hacker for quite a while now, I suggested to go find something to start our own hack. Turned out to be quite simple...

step 1: Parts

We both liked the Lansa handle, and I was quite sure this would be fairly easy. My girlfriend still had a leftover shelf from another drawer she did not need any more. From our kitchen accessories we also had some Grundtal hooks leftover.

step 2: Built

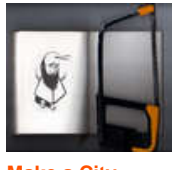

The shelf was about 2cm thick and if it would have been any thicker, the screws wouldn't have fit. The holes I had to drill were 5mm. Four holes to mount it to the wall plus two holes for each handle. You really have to measure carefully to get the dimension correct. I mounted it to the wall with four screws and my girlfriend liked it...

Related Instructables

From old locker to hip wardrobe
by jdrenard

Make a City Storyteller's Backpack by faizzohri

How to make a food smoker with Ikea parts, the Salmon Smoker Ikea Hack by Eric Rochow

Space Saving Closet Hangers by chwbcc

Make Great-Looking S-Hooks - Cheap by brbaldwin

Sliding pants rack by phantazn

To: Make Tomato Ladders from the IKEA Salvia Trellis by poweredbytofu

Estantería - armario infantil by tururu