Mana,

It is the consensus of the Tech Team to use the RigRunner power distribution units and power pole connectors for each power supply at all installations. They are what most of us use in our home stations and are readily available from HRO. They also would allow us to recover more easily should failures occur. Fuse values can be adjusted based on the particular radios connected. Assuming that's OK, can ISD add them to the previously submitted repair requests or do I need to update all of them?

Thanks,

Deane

Sir, I will have to look into this more. If the boss is ok with it, he would have ISD order the parts and do the work. Thank you for all of your help.
